

Instructions for Applying for First Families of the Tennessee Valley

Many families moved into the area now called the Tennessee Valley well before statehood, when it was still Indian Territory. In 1798 an act of Congress created the Mississippi Territory, which included all the area now in Alabama and Mississippi north of 31 degrees and south of 32 degrees, 28 minutes. Madison County became a county in 1809. Finally, during the war of 1812, Congress seized the Mobile District of West Florida and thus completed the Territory.

The act of March 3, 1817 created the Alabama territory, establishing its boundaries, making Mississippi Territorial law applicable, and making St. Stephens the new capital. Alabama grew so rapidly that there were only two sessions of the territorial legislature before statehood. President Monroe signed the bill for Alabama's admission as a state on December 14, 1819.

First Families is a project of the Tennessee Valley Genealogical Society to find those persons who lived in the Tennessee Valley prior to December 14, 1819. If one of your ancestors qualifies please submit your application and join us.

There are two things you have to prove:

1. You must prove that before 14 December 1819, one of your ancestors lived in one of the nine counties of North Alabama in the Tennessee Valley. These are Colbert, Franklin, Jackson, Lauderdale, Lawrence, Limestone, Madison, Marshall and Morgan counties.

AND

2. You must prove that you are a direct lineal descendant of that ancestor, proving the bloodline in each and every generation.

Your ancestor didn't have to stay here indefinitely, but he or she had to have lived here before that date.

You apply by completing an application form available on the TVGS website or obtained by requesting one by mail, attaching documentation of proof and a non-refundable $25 application fee per ancestor for First Families of the Tennessee Valley, which includes a certificate for each ancestor.
